The Final Times of Jim Morrison

—Edward Sanders

In a way he was an American Rock and Roll Bacchus

In another he was a canny performer who used his musical/literary abilities to please and rouse up a Rebellious Generation

He was apparently inspired by repeated watchings of the Living Theater's Paradise Now in Los Angeles & San Francisco in Feb of ’69

where the Theater appeared in a near nude mode on stage

making Morrison consider trying it himself

March 1, 1969, at a Mad-with-Bacchus concert in Miami
  the pud-flash which caused him much Bacchic trouble worthy of Euripides

  (there’s a question as to whether he actually did it several books indicate a Doors crewman prevented the actual flash)

Flash or not, in a few days a warrant for Jim’s arrest for pud-dangle
    in front of an audience

Forward to 1970

  according to Tony Sanchez’s Up and Down with the Rolling Stones (try around page 213)

  Marianne Faithfull and Mick Jagger parted ways in May of ’70
He told her he was moving to France because of tax reasons.

From early 1964, when she was 17 till the spring six years later she and Mick Jagger had had an, uh, turbulent relationship.

But now she said she was not going to accompany him and left 48 Cheyne Walk in London’s Chelsea District which she had shared with Jagger since 1968.

(Dante Gabriel Rossetti, & Algernon Swinburne had lived in 16 Cheyne Walk in 1862)

In July of ’70 Pamela Courson, a long time confidante, friend and lover of Morrison was living with Jean de Breteuil at his family’s villa in Marrakesh at least for a few days but moved with Jean back to Los Angeles by the end of the month where the Count pushed his heavy-duty possibly uncut horse upon his “celebrity” pals.

(The Doors back in early ’66 had been the house band at a place in L.A. called the London Fog a 19 year old redhead from California named Pamela Courson came to a show and then another show & in the coming weeks struck a friendship with Jim and a loveship which lasted over five years)
Jimi
September 18, 1970

the great Jimi Hendrix choked on his stomach flow & passed away in London after too much Too Much debreuil’s Heroin

Jim’s long time girl friend Pamela Courson in early fall of ’70 was now hooked on heroin and living in L.A. with young count Jean de Breteuil in the country illegally and selling junk to young celebrities

De Breteuil’s family allegedly owned all the French-language newspapers in North Africa, & after his father had passed away a few years earlier, Jean inherited the title Comte de Breteuil a line of counts oozing back 700 years

In Miami
Jim was found guilty on misdemeanor counts of indecent exposure & “open profanity”

Morrison’s Mug Shot the Day he was Found Guilty

The same day, after a Stones concert in Paris Jagger met a woman from Nicaragua named Bianca Perez Moreno de Macias They in fairly short order became a couple

Janis
October 5

In a session in Los Angeles that day Janis Joplin had finished the beautiful vocals for “Me and Bobby McGee” and in the evening she and her band recorded a Happy Birthday salute to John Lennon

The session ended around midnight & she returned to her room at the Landmark Motel in Los Angeles where she took a shot of dangerous, un-cut heroin provided to her by the young Count Jean de Breteuil who brought in h apparently in diplomatic pouches

Janis went out to the lobby & purchased some cigarettes chatted with the lobby man how happy she was with her new record returned to her room & fell to the floor not to rise

uncut dope
tied the rope

Jean de Breteuil
was mightily worried after his dope killed Janis

He faced a huge prison term if he, an “illegal alien” were found to have killed through horse De Breteuil asked Pamela Courson to flee with him to Paris. She did, leaving Morrison a note which upon reading he burned.

Some time in the several months thereafter de Breteuil hooked up with Marianne Faithfull, meeting her in London while he stayed at Keith Richards’ house.

As for Jim Morrison, he was amoil and aboil with trysts & partying moving from hotel to motel in the fall of 1970.

The Doors were busy recording L.A. Woman after long-time producer Paul Rothschild quit.

They recorded it in a home-grown studio set up in their business office.

It was a fine, final album.

December 8, 1970
Jim’s 27th birthday
he recorded three hours of poetry at a studio in West L.A. called Village Recorders reciting from notebooks and typed poems twenty two pieces in all (maybe more)

One book lists the following:

“Book of Days”
“Ghost Song”
“White Blind Light”
“The Holy Shay”

He performed “The American Night” striking chords as he read on the piano

He sang-intoned some poems a cappella such as “Bird of Prey” “Winter Photography” “Under Waterfall”
and “Woman in the Window”

(It’s difficult to list exactly because the reel-to-reels apparently reside with Pamela’s parents, and have never been commercially released)

December 11
the Doors final several concerts first Dallas
then the next night New Orleans then back to L.A.
after which they suspended all future gigs

Morrison spent the rest of December finishing L.A. Woman

Pamela Courson
just before Christmas returned to L.A. from Paris apparently urging Jim to quit the Doors and come back to France with her

In January 1971 the final two weeks completing L.A. Woman recorded on 8-track tape

At last they finished the mixes on what turned out to be the Door's most successful album

The Tracks

08 Crawling King Snake
09 The Wasp (Texas Radio And The Big Beat)
10 Riders On The Storm
11 The Celebration Of The Lizard

February 14, 1971
Pamela left by herself for Paris
She checked into the Hotel George V and re-hooked up with her on and off lover Count Jean de Breteuil

her source of skag

March 8, before Jim departed for France Courson called from Paris saying she'd located a good place for them to live

Morrison went to Paris on March 12

He brought prints of his two films, Feast of Friends and HWY

some notebooks a typed poetry manuscript

two quarter inch reels of his poetry readings

a Super-8 movie camera a file of photos

plus some books and clothing

Landing, Jim took a cab to the George V hotel but found it empty no Pamela Courson

who was now a stone junkie

One of her lovers was the young Frenchman named Jean de Breteuil
who specialized in peddling strong, even uncut heroin reportedly brought in through diplomatic channels perhaps even in diplomatic pouches

(his uncut junk had killed Janis)

Pamela had been hanging out with the Count’s wealthy junk-batty pals

Through connections of de Breteuil Pamela located an apartment for Jim to sublet which he did in the middle of March

It was a 3rd floor pad on the Right Bank at 17, rue Beuretillus not far from the Place de la Bastille owned by a French “cover girl” known as ZoZo

While in Paris,
Morrison was carrying around a satchel of texts and poetry jotting ideas into a spiral bound notebook plus attempting to get a screening of his two films

April 10
in a rented Peugeot Jim and Pam drove into Spain

on a three week trip visited the Prado in Madrid then south to Granada

May 3
they flew from Marrakesh to Casablanca & then back to Paris and moved when returning to the exclusive L'Hôtel on rue de Beaux-Arts on the Left Bank

(because ZoZo and pals were temporarily residing in her pad)

L'Hotel had 25 finely appointed rooms

Jim and Pam spent around two weeks at L'Hôtel (Oscar Wilde had passed away there in late Nov of 1900 when it was a modest place called Maison du Perier, famously commenting “Either that wallpaper goes, or I do.”)

De Breteuil in Southern France

Meanwhile, five Stones had moved to southern France in the spring where they set up a home-based recording studio to record what became Exile on Main Street

Mick and Bianca were married on 5-13 in St. Tropez
she was pregnant

Meanwhile the young pusher named Count De Breteuil showed up at Keith Richards’ house in France with a woman’s compact loaded with horse

Richards was grateful and offered de Breteuil De Breteuil was soon luxuriating in the luxury & learned that Paul and Tālitha Getty lived just a few doors away

At their house Jean met Marianne Faithfull

Jean just happened to be there “He was Tālitha’s lover,” wrote Faithfull in her autobio “and somehow I ended up with him.... He had a lot of dope. It was all about drugs and sex... He was with me only because I’d been involved with Mick Jagger.
In that froggy way he was obsessed with all that To him I was très le type rock ’n’ roll.”

She went with Jean de Breteuil back to Keith’s house on Cheyne Walk

“I lived there with him for months & then we went to Paris for a weekend.”

A fatal weekend for Jim Morrison

Jim/Pam flew to Corsica where they spent ten days

Then late May Jim moved back into 17, rue Beautrellis

An acetate of L.A. Woman arrived from Elektra which Jim listened to ’gain and ’gain

(It was around then that Jim wrote a poem “As I look Back”)

Early in June
Jim and Pam flew to London for a few days

Jean de Breteuil & Marianne Faithfull were living in Keith Richards’ house

(Richards and the other Rolling Stones were in southern France)

Back in Paris
Jim was drinking heavily Sometimes passed out late at night in strange places

Two weeks before his fatal snorts of uncut Morrison picked up a two-man band performing in the street and took them for an impromptu session at a second floor studio not far from the Café Flore and recorded a spontaneous version of Morrison’s tune “Orange County Suite” and took the quarter-inch tape with him, sticking it in a bag he carried along with his poems and notebooks

End of June ’71

Pamela Courson moved back into the flat where Morrison was living at 17, rue Beautrellis

She had been off and on residing at Jean de Breteuil’s pad but he had shown up from London with the hooked Marianne Faithfull in tow

Jean and Marianne moved into L’Hôtel and de Breteuil reputedly forked over “Chinese heroin” to both Pamela & Marianne July 2-3

After going to the movies with Pamela it was a Friday night they ate some Chinese food At 1 a.m. they returned to their apartment

That's the time-track Pamela later laid out

Jim was sipping whiskey
Pam was slicing lines of heroin on a mirror Jim and she began snorting it through rolled up money

They watched Super-8 footage of their travels in Spain, Morocco & Corsica with a projector on a chair aimed at a blank wall where a painting had been removed

In between reels they honked down strips of the powerful horse

(Why was JM honking horse?
Wasn't he an alcohol, pot & coke guy and not a heroin man?

Here's the truth: Courson later told a Morrison biographer [Danny Sugarman] He thought he was honking in lines of coke)

Pam claimed that Jim listened to Doors records into the night

He began coughing, difficulty clearing his throat

According to Pam, he asked for more junk before sleep
junk she had purchased from Jean de Breteuil

Pam said that Jim was still awake when she nodded out in horse-sleep

She came to maybe an hour later to find Jim, next to her on the bed, gurgling. She slapped his face, then hit him a few times, till he began to rouse

Jim somehow made it into the bathroom where there was a bidet, a toilet & a narrow, tiled-wall tub with a hand-held shower nozzle and placed himself down in the tub

Someone turned on the water

Pamela nodded out again in the bedroom and then she awakened to the sounds of Jim in the tub vomiting clots of blood & chunks of pineapple

After considerable vomiting
She later claimed Jim said to go back to bed
He felt better

(He remained in the narrow uncomfortable tub?)

Around 5 a.m. she slept

Around an hour later, she again awakened Dawn was devouring the gloom

She further claimed that the bathroom door was locked from the inside (unlikely)

& that Jim didn’t respond when she beat on the boards

She called Jean de Breteuil at L'Hôtel

Pamela Courson, Marianne Faithfull, Jean de Breteuil Faithfull was zonked out (she says) on Tuinols (but not heroin—possibly a fib) and asleep in the hotel when Pamela telephoned & inform Jean that Jim was gone

(How did she know that if the bathroom door was locked from the inside?)

De Breteuil dressed and rushed over to the apartment dreading and worrying that he had killed two American stars

Why is it that de Breteuil’s hot horse killed Morrison
but not Courson
(& not Faithfull?)

Faithfull’s recollections:

When Pamela called Jean at L'Hôtel
he prepared to leave at once

Faithfull woke up & said, “Jean, listen to me.
I’ve got to meet Jim Morrison.”

De Breteuil replied:
“Not possible, baby. Not cool right now, okay?”

Faithfull: “You are an idiot and a fucking prig!”

De Breteuil: “Not now. Je t’explique later, okay?

Faithfull: “He slammed out of the room.
He returned in the early hours of the morning in an agitated state and woke me up.

“I was fucked up on Tuinals.

Then, for no apparent reason, he beat me up.....

(After the beating) I lit a cigarette and asked him:

“So, did you have a good time over there?
Aren’t you going to tell me why you’re in such a good mood?’

“Get packed.’

“Are we going somewhere?’

“Morocco.’

“Very funny. We just got here.’

“I want you to meet my mother. Hurry up!’

“Uh-oh...What happened over there?’

“Shut up goddammit!’

“Oh, shit!’

“Yeah. It’s fucked.’

Not very eloquent colloquy as recounted by Faithfull on how she learned an American Bacchus was gone

They manically packed and flew to Tangier where they stayed with his mother the Comtesse de Breteuil for a week

Meanwhile at the Finale Tableau at 17, rue Beaufort

Phone calls had been made by Pamela who in the months and years leading to her own death in ‘74 told various versions of what went down

She called Jim’s friend, filmmaker Agnès Varda
Alain Ronay answered

She said something like “Jim is unconscious, Alain.... he’s bleeding. Can you call an ambulance for me?.... You know, I can’t speak French.... Oh, please....
I think he may be dying....”

She was sobbing

Varda was informed who right away called the Paris fire department which had the reputation as having the best rescue squad

She and Ronay sped to Jim’s apartment

(Agnès Varda was one of the screenwriters for Bernardo Bertolucci’s Last Tango in Paris and based the final scenes of the movie on what she had seen and learned about Jim Morrison’s death)

The fire squad lifted Jim out of the bathtub but the body was already chilly and they carried it to the bedroom and laid it upon it

De Breteuil showed up conferred with Pam telling her to flush all the drugs and that she had the use of Keith Richards’ house in London or any of his family’s places in Morocco should she need them

Then the Count fled before the police arrived
There was no autopsy
The cause of death was listed as a heart attack & Jim was buried in Père-Lachaise cemetery
